Introduction to Telehealth and Telemedicine

What is Telehealth?
Telehealth is the practice of using any combination of technologies to enhance patient care and improve the healthcare delivery system, encompassing a broad range of services. Telehealth can even refer to non-clinical services, like continuing medical education.

What is Telemedicine?
Telemedicine refers specifically to the practice of using technology to provide remote clinical services. Telemedicine can include diagnosis, treatment, and, if the provider is qualified to do so, the prescription of various kinds of medication.

How do states generally organize their telehealth or telemedicine statutes?
There are a few common ways that states have chosen to enact telehealth as a function of various healthcare providers:

- A dedicated section to telehealth or telemedicine within a statute regulating individual occupations, indicating with a list or specifically by name which practitioners are able to use telehealth and/or telemedicine
- Within the scope of practice or the definitions of various health professions
- A section to telehealth within a statute dedicated to a profession outlining the criterion and scope of telehealth practice

Why Does it Matter?

If a state statute does not explicitly authorize chiropractors to practice telehealth or telemedicine, it probably will not be covered by insurance.

Lack of health insurance coverage for telehealth would likely be probative to patients attempting to use the service.

Del. Code Ann. tit. 24, § 6001 (West)

“Health-care provider” means any person authorized to deliver clinical health-care services by telemedicine and participate in telehealth pursuant to this chapter and regulations promulgated by the respective professional boards listed in § 6002.

Del. Code Ann. tit. 24, § 6001 (West)

Health-care providers licensed by the following professional boards existing under this title are authorized to deliver health-care services by telehealth and telemedicine subject to the provisions of this chapter: …The Board of Chiropractic created pursuant to Chapter 7 of this title.

DC

Chiropractic telehealth is likely not permitted under DC law.

In order to practice telemedicine for a patient located within the District of Columbia, a license to practice medicine in the District of Columbia is required.

D.C. Mun. Regs. tit. 17, § 4618

Chiropractors do not have a medical license and are therefore likely unable to practice telemedicine in DC.

Florida

Chiropractic telehealth is likely permitted under Florida state law.

“Telehealth” means the use of synchronous or asynchronous telecommunications technology by a telehealth provider to provide health care services, including, but not limited to, assessment, diagnosis, consultation, treatment, and monitoring of a patient; transfer of medical data; patient and professional health-related education; public health services; and health administration. The term does not include audio-only telephone calls, e-mail messages, or facsimile transmissions.

“Telehealth provider” means any individual who provides health care and related services using telehealth and who is licensed or certified under…chapter 460.

Chiropractors are licensed under chapter 460.

Such term includes audio-only telephone only when no other means of real-time two-way audio, visual, or other telecommunications or electronic communications are available to the patient due to lack of availability of such real-time two-way audio, visual, or other telecommunications or electronic communications, due to lack of adequate broadband access, or because the use of other means of real-time two-way audio, visual, or other telecommunications or electronic communications is infeasible, impractical, or otherwise not medically advisable, as determined by the health care provider providing telemedicine services to the patient or as determined by another health care provider with an existing relationship with the patient.</td>

Chiropractic is defined to be the science of palpating and adjusting the articulations of the human spinal column by hand; provided that the practice of chiropractic as contemplated and set forth in this chapter may include the use of necessary patient evaluation and management procedures of the human spinal column, hot or cold packs, whirlpool, therapeutic and rehabilitative exercise, traction, electrical and electromechanical stimulation, therapeutic ultrasound, myofascial release, diathermy, infrared, and chiropractic spinal manipulative treatment and extraspinal evaluations for the diagnosis and treatment of neuromusculoskeletal conditions related to the human spinal column, subject to the restrictions contained in this chapter; and provided further that the practice of chiropractic as contemplated and set forth in this chapter shall not include the practice of lomilomi or massage. For the purposes of this section, spinal refers to the five spinal regions: cervical region (includes atlanto-occipital joint); thoracic region (includes costovertebral and costotransverse joint); lumbar region; sacral region; and pelvic (sacroiliac joint) region.

The definition of telehealth is under the chapter on “Medicine and Surgery,” which does not contain the chapter on chiropractors. Additionally, the definition of “chiropractic” does not contain the ability to perform telemedicine. However, chiropractic telehealth is not explicitly banned.

Chiropractic telehealth is most likely permitted under Idaho law.

“Telehealth services” means health care services provided by a provider to a person through the use of electronic communications, information technology, asynchronous store and forward transfer or synchronous interaction between a provider at a distant site and a patient at an originating site. Such services include but are not limited to clinical care, health education, home health and facilitation of self-managed care and caregiver support, and the use of synchronous or asynchronous telecommunications technologies by a provider to deliver patient health care services, including but not limited to assessment of, diagnosis of, consultation with, treatment of, and remote monitoring of a patient; transfer of medical data; patient and professional health-related education; public health services; and health administration. The term “telehealth services” does not include audio in isolation without access to and review of the patient's medical records, electronic mail messages that are not compliant with the health insurance portability and accountability act (HIPAA), or facsimile transmissions.

“Provider” means any health care provider who is licensed, required to be licensed, or, if located outside of Idaho, would be required to be licensed if located in Idaho, pursuant to title 54, Idaho Code, to deliver health care consistent with his or her license.

“Healthcare provider” means a physician, licensed physician assistant, licensed advanced practice registered nurse or person licensed, registered, certified or otherwise authorized to practice by the behavioral sciences regulatory board.

Massachusetts

Chiropractic telehealth is most likely permitted under Massachusetts law.

For purposes of this section “telehealth” shall mean the use of synchronous or asynchronous audio, video, electronic media or other telecommunications technology, including, but not limited to: (i) interactive audio-video technology; (ii) remote patient monitoring devices; (iii) audio-only telephone; and (iv) online adaptive interviews, for the purpose of evaluating, diagnosing, consulting, prescribing, treating or monitoring of a patient's physical health, oral health, mental health or substance use disorder condition.

Notwithstanding any provision of this chapter to the contrary, the board shall allow a physician licensed by the board to obtain proxy credentialing and privileging for telehealth services with other health care providers, as defined in section 1 of chapter 111, or facilities that comply with the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services’ conditions of participation for telehealth services.

Mississippi

Chiropractic telehealth is probably not permitted under Mississippi law.

Except as hereinafter provided, no person shall engage in the practice of medicine across state lines (telemedicine) in this state, hold himself out as qualified to do the same, or use any title, word or abbreviation to indicate to or induce others to believe that he is duly licensed to practice medicine across state lines in this state unless he has first obtained a license to do so from the State Board of Medical Licensure and has met all educational and licensure requirements as determined by the State Board of Medical Licensure.

Miss. Code. Ann. § 73-25-34 (West)

The Mississippi telehealth statute appears to conflate practice across state lines with telemedicine, and it is only able to be practiced by those with a license from the Board of Medicine. Chiropractors are therefore likely unable to practice telemedicine under Mississippi law.

Missouri

Chiropractic telehealth is most likely permitted under Missouri law.

“Telehealth” or “telemedicine”, the delivery of health care services by means of information and communication technologies which facilitate the assessment, diagnosis, consultation, treatment, education, care management, and self-management of a patient's health care while such patient is at the originating site and the health care provider is at the distant site. Telehealth or telemedicine shall also include the use of asynchronous store-and-forward technology.

Mo. Ann. Stat. § 376.1350 (West)

The “practice of chiropractic” is defined as the science and art of examination, diagnosis, adjustment, manipulation and treatment both in inpatient and outpatient settings, by those methods commonly taught in any chiropractic college or chiropractic program in a university which has been accredited by the Council on Chiropractic Education, its successor entity or approved by the board. It shall not include the use of operative surgery, obstetrics, osteopathy, podiatry, nor the administration or prescribing of any drug or medicine nor the practice of medicine. The practice of chiropractic is declared not to be the practice of medicine and operative surgery or osteopathy within the meaning of chapter 334 and not subject to the provisions of the chapter.

Mo. Ann. Stat. § 331.010 (West)
Montana

The practice of chiropractic likely fits under the definition of a health care service, and is therefore eligible to be carried out through telehealth, although there is no specific mention of the profession in the statute.

Chiropractic telehealth is probably not permitted under Montana law.

“Telemedicine” means the practice of medicine using interactive electronic communications, information technology, audio-only conversations, or other means between a licensee in one location and a patient in another location with or without an intervening health care provider. Telemedicine includes the application of secure videoconferencing or store-and-forward technology.

MT LEGIS 242 (2021), 2021 Montana Laws Ch. 242 (H.B. 43)

“Practice of medicine” means the diagnosis, treatment, or correction of or the attempt to or the holding of oneself out as being able to diagnose, treat, or correct human conditions, ailments, diseases, injuries, or infirmities, whether physical or mental, by any means, methods, devices, or instrumentalities, including electronic and technological means such as telemedicine. If a person who does not possess a license to practice medicine in this state under this chapter and who is not exempt from the licensing requirements of this chapter performs acts constituting the practice of medicine, the person is practicing medicine in violation of this chapter.

MT LEGIS 242 (2021), 2021 Montana Laws Ch. 242 (H.B. 43)

Chiropractors likely do not fit under this definition because they are not licensed by the medical board, and therefore are not licensed to practice medicine under the definition in the statute.

Nebraska

Chiropractic telehealth may be permitted under Nebraska law.

Telehealth means the use of medical information electronically exchanged from one site to another, whether synchronously or asynchronously, to aid a credential holder in the diagnosis or treatment of a patient. Telehealth includes services originating from a patient's home or any other location where such patient is located, asynchronous services involving the acquisition and storage of medical information at one site that is then forwarded to or retrieved by a credential holder at another site for medical evaluation, and telemonitoring.

Except as otherwise provided in subsection (4) of this section, any credential holder under the Uniform Credentialing Act may establish a provider-patient relationship through telehealth.

NE LEGIS 148 (2021), 2021 Nebraska Laws L.B. 148

The section on chiropractic practice is under the Uniform Credentialing Act, and chiropractors are therefore likely able to practice telehealth. However, because that statute specifically states that those licensed in professions which are under the Act may “establish a provider-patient relationship through telehealth,” and does not specifically state that they may continue to practice, chiropractic telehealth in general “may” be permitted.

Nevada

Chiropractic telehealth is most likely permitted under Nevada law.

“Telehealth” means the delivery of services from a provider of health care to a patient at a different location through the use of information and audio-visual communication technology, not including standard telephone, facsimile or electronic mail.

Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, before a provider of health care who is located at a distant site may use telehealth to direct or manage the care or render a diagnosis of a patient who is located at an originating site in this State or write a treatment order or prescription for such a patient, the provider must hold a valid license or certificate to practice his or her profession in this State.

All licenses must be signed by the President and the Secretary and be attested by the official seal of the Board. The required fee must be collected before a license to practice chiropractic is delivered

Chiropractors are licensed health care professionals and are therefore most likely able to practice telehealth.

New Hampshire

Chiropractic telehealth is permitted under New Hampshire law.

27:18 New Section; Chiropractic Examiners. Amend RSA 316-A by inserting after section 15 the following new section:

Ohio Admin. Code 5160-1-18

Chiropractors are not mentioned in an extremely detailed list of professions able to practice telehealth, which makes it very unlikely that they are legally able to practice in the state.

Oklahoma

Chiropractic telehealth may be permitted under Oklahoma law.
As used in the Oklahoma Telemedicine Act, “telemedicine” means technology-enabled health and care management and delivery systems that extend capacity and access, which includes:
a. synchronous mechanisms, which may include live audiovisual interaction between a patient and a health care professional or real-time provider to provider consultation through live interactive audiovisual means,
b. asynchronous mechanisms, which include store and forward transfers, online exchange of health information between a patient and a health care professional and online exchange of health information between health care professionals, but shall not include the use of automated text messages or automated mobile applications that serve as the sole interaction between a patient and a health care professional,
c. remote patient monitoring, and
d. other electronic means that support clinical health care, professional consultation, patient and professional health-related education, public health and health administration.

Nowhere in the Act does it specify which providers are able to practice telehealth, and the Act itself is under a Title dealing with insurance, so there is no guiding information or limitations there.

(h) testifying as a physician in an administrative, civil, or criminal proceeding in this State by expressing an expert medical opinion

S.C. Code Ann. § 40-47-20

The South Carolina statute places telemedicine under the purview of those who practice medicine. Chiropractors are excluded from this definition and are therefore likely unable to practice telemedicine.

South Dakota

Chiropractic telehealth is probably permitted under South Dakota law.

Any health care professional treating a patient in the state through telehealth shall be:
(1) Fully licensed to practice in the state or employed by a licensed health care facility, an accredited prevention or treatment facility, a community support provider, a nonprofit mental health center, or a licensed child welfare agency under § 36-32-76; and
(2) Subject to any rule adopted by the applicable South Dakota licensing body.

S.D. Codified Laws § 34-52-2
“Health care professional,” a physician or other health care practitioner licensed, accredited, or certified to perform specified health services consistent with state law;

S.D. Codified Laws § 58-17F-1

Chiropractic is the science of locating and removing the cause of any abnormal transmission of nerve energy including diagnostic and applied mechanical measures incident thereto. Integral to chiropractic is the treating of specific joints and articulations of the body and adjacent tissues, to influence joints or neurophysiological functions of the body, or both, including the use of examination and treatment by manipulation, adjustment, and mobilization of a joint.

S.D. Codified Laws § 36-5-1

Because chiropractors are licensed to perform specific health services as laid out in the statute, it is likely that they are able to practice telemedicine.

Tennessee

Chiropractic telehealth is probably permitted under South Dakota law.

(3) “Telehealth,” “telemedicine,” and “provider-based telemedicine” mean:

(A) The use of real time audio, video, or other electronic media and telecommunication technology that enables interaction between a healthcare provider and a patient for the purpose of diagnosis, consultation, or treatment of a patient at a distant site where there may be no in-person exchange between a healthcare provider and a patient; or

(B) Store-and-forward telemedicine services.

Tenn. Code Ann. § 63-1-155 (West)
